

INTERVIEWS: Tom Jensen 919-744-6312IF YOU HAVE BASIC METHODOLOGICAL QUESTIONS, PLEASE E-MAIL information@publicpolicypolling.com, OR CONSULT THE FINAL PARAGRAPH OF THE PRESS RELEASE*National Opinion on Libya, the Norquist Plan and Obama's Reelection

Raleigh, N.C. – PPP's latest national poll finds that when it comes to the situation in Libya, Americans trust the President slightly more than Congressional Republicans 48/45. Despite the sordid sex scandal, Americans have a generally favorable opinion of David Petraeus 44/30. Democrats were more likely to have a favorable opinion of Petraeus than Republicans were 47/38. But only 35% of women had a favorable opinion of Petraeus, compared to 53% of men.

Voters had a 15% favorable opinion of Grover Norquist versus 37% who opined unfavorably. But favorability for Norquist was higher than the average among Hispanic voters at 26%, compared to 14% white and 7% African American favorability. When asked if voters thought it was important for politicians to abide by his tax pledge, voters responded "not important" 39/23 with 38% responding "not sure."

30% of respondents indicated they thought Democrats engaged in voter fraud. 33% of Hispanics, the same percentage as of white voters, believe that Democrats engaged in voter fraud, to only 15% of African Americans. When asked if they thought Barack Obama legitimately won the Presidential election this year or if ACORN stole it for him, 24% responded that they did steal the election for him, while 60% thought he won legitimately and 10% were unsure. Half of the Republicans polled (49%) thought ACORN stole the election. 18% of respondents said they would support their state seceding from the union due to Obama's reelection, to 68% who would oppose the measure. 27% of Hispanics would support secession, compared to 19% of white voters and 12% of African American voters. Young voters were also more likely to support succession. 29% of 18-29 year olds would support succession, while only 14% of voters age 46-65 and only 16% of voters age 65+ would support it.

"A lot of Republicans are having a hard time accepting the results of the election," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "Some want their states to secede from the union, while others claim they don't think Obama was the legitimate winner."

PPP surveyed 700 voters from November 30th - December 2nd. The margin of error for the survey is +/- 3.7 percentage points. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
